Improving Your Reading with Predicting Pip: Out on the Ocean

Early on a summer morning, two men headed to the shore, launched their boat and set sail. It was the calm hour of the morning before sunrise, when most living creatures are still asleep. The sea was like a sheet of undulating glass. A breeze had been expected but it had not arrived, so the boatmen needed to use their oars. They used them well and the land finally vanished in the mists of morning.

Under the regular stroke of the oars the boat advanced steadily, straight out to sea. At first, the mirror over which they skimmed was grey but soon they rowed into a brighter region. The sea ahead lightened up, becoming pale yellow before blazing into liquid gold. Suddenly, the calm of the crystalline ocean was broken by a noise, which stirred both rowers' attention.

"D'ye hear that, Davy?" enquired the first of the men.

"Aye, I sure do," replied Davy, turning his attention to the source.

1. What do you think the two men intended to do? Why do you think this?
